Seminole Food Garden at Florida State University
Prepared by the Campus Garden Board's Brent Williams and SGA Senator Martha Lang

The Seminole Food Garden Budget for the 2013-2014 year takes into account the continued growth of the garden beyond the current four planting beds and the trees and perennial plants planted around the perimeter. There are enough materials to build six more raised beds to be rented by student organizations; however, soil and compost are needed to fill these beds. More plants are needed to complete the plantings around the perimeter. Wood structures need to be built to contain soil, mulch and compost, in addition to wood structures for trellising plants. Tool and Equipment needs include a lawnmower and weed eater to maintain the grass growing around trees and tables and other tools and irrigation equipment for both the maintenance of the trees and the garden beds. All money will be managed by the Office of Campus Sustainability.

A message from the Office of Campus Sustainability:

"The FSU Sustainable Campus office and Facilities department continues to endorse and support the Campus Garden project and this request for funding. We have been working closely with the founding group to ensure the success and growth of the program, as well as providing infrastructural oversight to its development. The funding will allow the group to become self-sufficient and attend to the garden in a more student-friendly way. Your continued support is greatly appreciated as this program is given the time to grow into something really special for our campus."
