Questions:

- What are the funds for?
 - Sports psychiatry is a relatively new and unknown sub-specialty within psychiatry that focuses on mental health care and sports performance in (usually) elite athletes. This event will provide an interesting learning opportunity for those interested in psychiatry and/or sports in general to learn about the unique mental health/interpersonal challenges faced by athletes, the special considerations one must take into consideration when treating them, as well as the potential impacts of mental health issues on athletic performance.
 - Note: Reminded RSO that purchase is tax exempt

Questions:

- What are the funds for?
 - RSO Appreciation Lunch for advisors of RSOs in the college of medicine. Throughout the school year, the advisors play a pivotal role in the moral and academic formation of the students in the college of medicine. Without their input into our education and knowledge, we would be unable to expand our horizons into the medical community as we are with them. We believe we should show due thanks to the people that make this possible for us in the college of medicine. Given our appreciation, we would like funding for the completion of this event
 - Note: Reminded RSO that purchase is tax exempt
 - Note: RSO is in charge of distributing food with masks per COVID guidelines
 - Note: Approved for a total of $854 from Social Catering

Questions:

- What are the funds for?
 - SIGN would like to host Dr. Jason Siegel, M.D., who is a neurologist and critical care specialist that went to Indiana University School of Medicine and completed his residency and fellowship at Mayo Clinic. After being at Mayo Clinic for a decade he decided to start his own telehealth neurology clinic, called NeuroNow. He will be presenting on his previous experiences, differences between working in academia vs starting his own practice, neuro history, advancements since he's been in medical school, and the current state of the medical environment.

Questions:

- What are the funds for?
 - This event serves as a chance for interested students to learn more about what GIG is about and what the leadership roles involve. All the current officers will be present, and they will prepare and present a PowerPoint to attendees. This PowerPoint will cover past events done by the organization, and it will explain potential events that could be done by the new teams. Afterwards, the floor will be opened up for any questions. We plan to have light snacks and refreshments for attendees. This will include donuts, chips, candy, and lemonade/sweet tea
